Care kids deserve.
On the cover: Five year old Rebecca Redman was born at only 24-1/2 weeks and soon after admitted to Connecticut Children’s NICU (Neonatal Intensive Care Unit). The NICU, one of Connecticut Children’s premier programs, admits approximately 500 babies each year, offering intensive medical, surgical, and nursing care, comprehensive diagnostic capabilities, and state-of-the-art bedside electronic monitoring, respiratory support, and radiology services.
Each day across Connecticut, children and their families are faced with a wide range of medical illnesses and issues. Whether it’s setting a cast or treating cancer, Connecticut Children’s provides kids, from newborns to teenagers, the highly-specialized care they deserve. In fact, we are at the forefront of the latest pediatric research and surgical advances. Each day Connecticut Children’s doctors and medical staff work tirelessly to deliver the kind of medical care we expect for our kids and our communities. Care that makes kids better — care they deserve.
PRESIDENT’S MESSAGE

"I can't begin to tell you how impressed I am with Connecticut Children's. I can't say enough good things about it. Thank you for saving my son's life."

As the President and Chief Executive Officer at Connecticut Children’s, I get to hear stories. Lots of stories, from parents to grandparents to friends of the many children we care for each year at the Medical Center. These heartfelt stories, from people who could not be more warm and gracious with their own personal experiences, confirm what I believe every day — Connecticut Children’s is truly, one of a kind.

Connecticut Children’s Medical Center is the only academic medical center in western New England that exists for one purpose only — to provide the highest level of care to as many children as possible. We do this with doctors and nurses who understand children best, because they treat only children. We do this by providing comprehensive care, ranging from pioneering advances in research to complicated surgical procedures.

“So I just wanted to send you a personal note telling you that we are completely and truly satisfied with all we have endured in your hospital and have seen a lot of miracles happen.”

In the past year, Connecticut Children’s provided care to a child over 240,000 times. Once again, the past twelve months were the busiest yet in the history of the Medical Center. We also celebrated providing care to a child for the 2,000,000th time in our short history.

In 2008 Connecticut Children’s and Hartford Hospital’s integrated pediatric and adult trauma center, The Trauma Institute, received Level I trauma verification and designation from the American College of Surgeons and the Connecticut Department of Public Health. Pictured from left to right are Lenworth Jacobs, MD, Director of Trauma for Hartford Hospital and the Trauma Institute; Scott James, RN, MBA, Administrations Director for Trauma and Emergency Care Services at Connecticut Children’s; Martin J. Gavin, President of Connecticut Children’s; and Brendan Campbell, MD, MPH, Director of Pediatric Trauma at Connecticut Children’s.
As the number of patients we care for each year continues to increase, we know that we have no choice but to continue to expand and broaden our capabilities to care for them as well. In 2008, we increased our capacity in a number of new ways, including the following:

- Connecticut Children’s performed the State’s first Vertical Expandable Prosthetic Titanium Rib surgery, a new technological procedure to treat severe scoliosis in children;
- The Medical Center is now one of only two hospitals in the State who have performed a relatively new, minimally invasive procedure known as endoscopic third ventriculostomy (ETV) for children with hydrocephalus;
- Twenty-three new physicians joined the Medical Center in thirteen different disciplines. This includes the hiring of a second neurosurgeon on staff, assuring that children referred to Connecticut Children’s will receive the most advanced treatment available; and most recently
- Connecticut Children’s and Hartford Hospital’s integrated pediatric and adult trauma center, The Trauma Institute, received Level I trauma verification and designation from the American College of Surgeons and the Connecticut Department of Health.

While these achievements represent only a small sample of the steps we took in the past year, they are a clear indication of our commitment to continue forward as a leader in advancing pediatric care at the highest level.

“We do not know how long we will be on this journey with our baby, but from day one, everyone has been actively working to cure our little boy and for that mindset alone, I will be forever grateful.”

The mission that Connecticut Children’s has embarked upon for the past twelve years will march on as well. As we look forward, we realize that there are challenges ahead. We are currently facing an uncertain economy that presents circumstances that have not been encountered before.

Yet the demand for pediatric health care is blind to these challenges. The reality is that in 2009, we expect to provide more care for more kids, in more ways than ever before and we expect to do the same each year thereafter. Last year, in anticipation of this growing demand and facing a constantly-changing environment, we developed a Strategic Plan to guide us through what we expect to be the next few tumultuous years.

Our Strategic Plan was built to position the Medical Center to best meet the increasing medical needs of the children and families we care for. We remain committed to our plan and steadfast on meeting the demand for world-class pediatric care the same way we have been doing so since our inception — with a focus on family-centered care, clinical quality, research and our ability to perform the most advanced technological and surgical procedures.

Connecticut Children’s is proud to be the region’s only hospital to provide care exclusively for children. As such, our mission is really quite simple – to ensure that every child receives the care they need to secure a bright and healthy future – the care they deserve.

Sincerely,

Martin J. Gavin
President and Chief Executive Officer
Connecticut Children’s Medical Center
As the region’s only academic medical center dedicated exclusively to children, Connecticut Children’s is unique. It is this uniqueness that leads more and more families to turn to Connecticut Children’s each year for care. We know that in the future we can expect this increased demand for care to continue to grow. We accept this readily, because we know the responsibility of caring for children is neither small nor easy.

This is why, though we now face a struggling and uncertain economy, we move ahead boldly. We move ahead, riding a sea of momentum that has Connecticut Children’s uniquely positioned to continue to be the leading provider of pediatric care for the children and families of our region.

We have thought very thoroughly and deliberately about what it will take to compete and succeed in the future of health care, and we have shaped Connecticut Children’s in recent years to meet these needs.

Continued new advances in technology and innovation will be needed to meet the changing requirements of providing pediatric health care in today’s sophisticated world. In addition, we must continue to employ a high performing workforce that is built from the best and the brightest, from the surgeons in our operating suites to our facilities staff, who keep our patients’ rooms warm and friendly. Finally, it will also take the continued support of our partners in government, business and the communities we have come to count on and appreciate so richly.

While we must evolve in these and other ways, we will never lose sight of our single mission — to provide the highest level of care to as many children as possible. This is the fundamental principle of everything we do. We all share the belief that the children we care for are the foundation for how everyone at Connecticut Children’s thinks about their work, each and every day.

Connecticut Children’s has a clear vision for success. Executing this vision will not only help the Medical Center prosper, but more importantly, it will improve our ability to excel at providing great care and service for children and families in our region.

In a recent survey conducted on behalf of the Medical Center, eighty-four percent of respondents believed that a child receives superior care at a hospital that only cares for children, when compared to one that treats patients of all ages. We couldn’t agree more.

On behalf of the Boards of Directors of the Medical Center, it is our privilege to play a role in leading the future of Connecticut Children’s. We are grateful for the opportunity to share in the successes of today, and more importantly, the successes yet to come.

Sincerely,

Thomas O. Barnes
Chairman
Connecticut Children’s Medical Center
Board of Directors
Care that saves.

Rebecca Redman, 2009 Connecticut Children’s Miracle Network Champion Child
Rebecca “Becca” Redman is a feisty and remarkable little girl — full of energy and life. But life didn’t begin that way for Becca. Dory Redman, Becca’s mother, became very sick with HELLP syndrome (Haemolysis, Elevated Liver Enzymes & Lowered Platelet Count) during her 24th week of pregnancy. Dory’s kidneys and liver were beginning to shut down. An emergency c-section was their only option. Becca was admitted to Connecticut Children’s Medical Center’s Neonatal Intensive Care Unit (NICU) shortly after she was born on July 30, 2003. At birth, she weighed only one pound, her tiny body no longer than a ruler. Born struggling to breathe, the NICU team put Becca on an oscillator respirator and developed a comprehensive treatment plan. Becca was in the right hands. As a Level III premier medical provider, Connecticut Children’s NICU cares for approximately 500 infants per year. The NICU is nationally recognized for its low patient infection rates and its high marks in patient care, quality of environment and family-patient satisfaction. “The quality of care that exists in our NICU is not only noticed by the staff and our counterparts across the country, it’s something that our families are very familiar with as well,” said Dr. Victor Herson, Director of Neonatology.

For the next several months Becca went through a series of highly-advanced treatments to help her body function normally. On August 18th, Dory and her husband, Gary were able to hold and kiss their baby girl for the very first time. And the good news kept coming. On September 29th Becca nursed off of the feeding tube; on October 29th the feeding tube was removed, and on November 7, 2003 Rebecca Morgan Redman was released from Connecticut Children’s NICU weighing a healthy 4lb, 4oz! Now Becca Redman is a strong, healthy five-year-old. She is making big plans for her future which include becoming a cheerleader, ballerina and scientist.

Becca and her family’s story is best summed up by her mother, Dory, as she reflects on their amazing journey, “At the time we were not nearly as scared as we should have been. Now when I look at Becca and think back, we are terrified of what could have been without a place like Connecticut Children’s.”
Whether it is teaching the next generation of pediatricians and surgeons or developing the next medical protocol for treatment of serious childhood diseases or basic laboratory research looking for hidden connections that will lead to the next leaps forward — we are always looking ahead,” said Paul H. Dworkin, MD, Professor and Chairman, Department of Pediatrics, University of Connecticut School of Medicine and Physician-in-Chief, Connecticut Children’s Medical Center. “Our relationship with the University of Connecticut School of Medicine is critical to our efforts to advance care for children. This partnership is also integral to the medical school’s vision of being nationally recognized and admired for the students they train. Currently all of the physicians on staff at Connecticut Children’s have faculty appointments at the UConn Medical School.”

The University of Connecticut Pediatrics Program is based at Connecticut Children’s. The hospital is home to a strong pediatrics residency program, with medical students rotating through the hospital’s departments of pediatrics, pediatric surgical specialties, and radiology, as well as other specialty departments for elective course work. The hospital also trains the UConn surgical residents in all surgical subspecialty areas of pediatric surgery. Dr. Dworkin continued, “We are proud of our training program, which provides clinical and educational experiences that promote the development of knowledgeable, skilled, compassionate and ethical pediatricians dedicated to the care of children.”

But the relationship between the hospital and the university goes much deeper. Many of the clinicians from Connecticut Children’s are also looking at the fundamental causes and cures for childhood diseases. “I am lucky. I get to work with some amazing researchers at the UConn facility,” adds Fernando Ferrer, MD, Surgeon-in-Chief, Connecticut Children’s Medical Center. Dr. Ferrer has been working closely with Timothy Hla, Ph.D., Director of UConn Center for Vascular Biology. They have been working with a team of UConn’s medical research staff to better understand, at a molecular level, the role of bioactive lipids on pediatric kidney tumors. “So much progress has been made in the last twenty years in the treatment of childhood cancers. And the research we are engaged in now has tremendous potential to control and perhaps cure cancer in the future.”

With every year that passes, UConn School of Medicine and Connecticut Children’s are gaining critical recognition nationally and internationally. These bright minds are collaborating to create a brighter future for children everywhere.
Care that advances.

Sherry Chapman, Co-founder, Mourning Parents Act, Inc. [IMPACT]
Sherry Chapman does not want any new members to join the organization she co-founded four years ago known as Mourning Parents Act, Inc. (IMPACT).

IMPACT is comprised primarily of parents whose teenage children have been killed in an automobile crash. IMPACT is a nonprofit group whose mission is to prevent tragedies caused by inexperienced drivers through awareness, education and legislation. Chapman’s 19-year-old son, Ryan, was killed by an inexperienced teen driver on Dec. 7, 2002.

“There have been a number of high-profile car accidents recently in which a young driver was killed,” Chapman said. “We’ve had many of these victims’ parents join us in an effort to get the message out. Unfortunately our increasing roster is a tragic reminder of the number of inexperienced teen drivers on the road.”

Chapman co-founded IMPACT with Janice Palmer whose 17-year-old son, Dan, was killed in a driving accident in 2002, and Connie and Tom Jascowski who lost their 16-year-old son, Joey, in an accident on Dec. 17, 2002. Chapman said IMPACT members share their experiences in powerful presentations to high school students across the state.

And like Sherry Chapman, the staff at Connecticut Children’s would like to not treat as many victims of teen-driving crashes as they currently do. That is why the Connecticut Teen Driving Safety Partnership was created, on which Ms. Chapman serves as a member. Funded by a grant from the Allstate Foundation, the Partnership’s overriding mission is to prevent teenage car crashes through research, education and advocacy.

Brendan Campbell, MD, MPH is the Director of Pediatric Trauma at Connecticut Children’s and the principle investigator for the grant which funds the CT Teen Driving Safety Partnership. From both his experience as a surgeon and a scientist, Dr. Campbell is well aware that it is much easier to prevent car-crash related injuries than to treat them.

“Traumatic injury is the leading cause of death for children and teens in Connecticut and motor vehicles crashes are the most common cause of traumatic injury,” said Dr. Campbell. “We are strong believers that community education and advocacy activities are the most effective way to reduce the injuries and deaths that result from inexperienced teens driving cars.”

The work of IMPACT and Connecticut Children’s Teen Driving Safety Partnership was so compelling that both Dr. Campbell and Ms. Chapman were asked by Governor M. Jodi Rell to sit on the Teen Driving Task Force which was formed last year. The Task Force was instrumental in helping draft new legislation, which strengthened the state’s teen driving laws.
As the number of children who come to the Medical Center increases each year, Connecticut Children’s continues to grow along with it. In addition to opening outpatient care centers in Glastonbury and Farmington, this growth will continue in 2009 with the opening of Connecticut Children’s Waterbury inpatient unit in January and the opening of a new outpatient care center in Trumbull later in the year.

In addition to enhancing the pediatric health care infrastructure across the State, this growth allows Connecticut Children’s to continue its role as an important contributor to the local communities and economies in the towns and cities from which it operates.

“I think because Connecticut Children’s is so skilled at their primary function of providing high-level pediatric care, some of the other benefits they bring to a community are often overlooked,” said Charles W. Shivery, Northeast Utilities Chairman of the Board, President, and Chief Executive Officer and a member of Connecticut Children’s Board of Directors.

Among the ways that Connecticut Children’s contributes economically is by employing more than 2000 people throughout the State, having hundreds of affiliated physicians and hosting hundreds of thousands of patients, family members and visitors in a number of towns and cities each year. In addition, each time the Medical Center expands by opening a new office, construction is needed and jobs are created.

“Any time we interview for a position at Northeast Utilities with candidates from outside the area, one of the first things they ask is: ‘How is the quality of health care in the area for my family?’” Mr. Shivery added. “To be able to say that in Connecticut Children’s, we have a leading pediatric care provider, is very reassuring.”

It is the growing access to pediatric care, along with the high quality of care that connects Connecticut Children’s with children and families throughout the region. For years now, the Medical Center has annually treated children from every one of the 169 towns and cities in Connecticut. As we continue to grow, Connecticut Children’s is committed to providing care for more children and families than ever, as close to home as possible.
Care that connects.

Fulfilling the hospital’s mission depends not only on our talented medical professionals, administrators and staff. It also depends on the essential support of our donors. We are fortunate that countless individuals, corporations, foundations, organizations and schools share our belief that the children and families of our region deserve to have an academic medical center dedicated exclusively to their care.

Our robust group of very special donors enhances every corner of the Medical Center. Contributions enable our neurosurgeons, neonatologists, oncologists and other pediatric subspecialists to treat even the most complex cases in a state-of-the-art facility designed especially for kids. Gifts to our basic, translational and outcomes research efforts help us to advance child health on a regional and national level. And, unrestricted donations allow us to meet our current needs while seeking the most innovative ways to expand the accessibility of the vital services we provide.

As Chairman of the Foundation Board, it is my pleasure to extend our deepest gratitude to all whose support has significantly impacted the children and families of our region. By giving so generously, they are helping to ensure that the work that is done each day at Connecticut Children’s is the most technologically advanced and compassionate as possible. Work that is saving children’s lives.

Sincerely,

Anne P. Sargent
Chair
Connecticut Children’s Medical Center Foundation

The following list includes donations by Individuals, Corporations, Foundations, Organizations, Schools, Bequests, and Memorials to Connecticut Children’s Medical Center between October 1, 2007 and September 30, 2008. While every gift that is made to the Medical Center is greatly valued, due to space constraints, we are only able to list a representative group of donors.

WDRC FM, 102.9 once again sponsored the Children's Miracle Network Radiothon to benefit Connecticut Children's over the 2008 Labor Day weekend. The Dwyer family of Avon was one of many families whose children have been patients at Connecticut Children's to share their stories as part of the Radiothon weekend.
On June 19, The Hoffman Auto Group held the grand opening of their newly-renovated Hoffman Lexus Dealership with an event to benefit Connecticut Children’s Medical Center. As the highlight of the evening, the Hoffman Auto Group presented a check for $125,000 to Connecticut Children’s from proceeds raised at the 10th Annual Burton C. Hoffman Golf Classic and the opening of the new Lexus dealership. Shown (from left to right) are: I. Bradley Hoffman, Connecticut Children’s patient Aaron Baral and Jeffrey Hoffman.

Every holiday season since Connecticut Children’s Medical Center opened in 1996, the Connecticut State Police, Troop H in Hartford, have collected gifts at local Toys R Us stores as part of their “Stuff A Cruiser” toy drive. Approximately 400,000 toys have been collected since the toy drive’s inception twelve years ago.
Prior to his appearance at the 2008 Connecticut Children’s Medical Center Friends Storybook Gala, award-winning performer Ben Vereen toured the Medical Center and visited with patients including Thomas Erserim, 8. Vereen and children’s author Suzy Kline co-headlined the Gala which raised a record $450,000 for Connecticut Children’s.
